

A conversation about your child

A free family planning sample • Page 1 of 2

Use this page to organize what you want a provider or school team to understand. You may leave any question blank. Keep completed pages private and choose what you want to share.

What does your child enjoy? What are their strengths?

How does your child communicate choices, discomfort, or a need for help?

Which everyday moment would you like to discuss with the team?

What matters most to your child and your family right now?

This sample is an educational organizer, not an assessment or treatment plan. It does not determine eligibility, services, or clinical goals. Discuss individual decisions with the appropriate professional.

Prepare for the next conversation

A free family planning sample • Page 2 of 2

Choose the questions that fit your situation. You do not need to solve everything in one meeting.

- What does this service include, and who will provide it?
- How will my child's preferences and communication be included?
- How will we choose goals together and review whether support is useful?
- What will this cost, and what needs approval before we begin?
- Who should I contact with questions or concerns?

My top two questions

What we agreed to do next, and who will do it

When and how we will follow up

About this sample: Created by Nicole K. Lamboy-Rosario, B.S., RBT. This is part of the developing EBSN parent-resource collection. RBT is a paraprofessional credential; this publication does not provide independent clinical services or create a professional-client relationship.

You may save and print this free sample for your household and share your completed copy with your chosen support team. This permission does not include resale or repackaging as another product.